Letter to Security Council sent by Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Minister for External Affairs

The following is the text of the letter addressed to the President of the Security Council of the United Nations by Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, Minister for External Affairs:

On behalf of the Government of Pakistan, I have the honour to request you to convene an immediate meeting of the Security Council of the United Nations to consider the grave situation that has arisen in the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

This situation is the direct consequence of the unlawful steps that the Government of India is continuing to take in order to destroy the special status of the State in arrogant disregard of the resolutions of the Security Council more specifically of those of March 30, 1951 and Jan. 24, 1957, and the resolutions of the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan of Aug. 13, 1948 and Jan. 5, 1949.

This sinister design of the Government of India to obliterate the special status of the State of Jammu and Kashmir was foreshadowed by Bakhshi Ghulam Mohammad, the then Premier of the Indian-occupied part of the State on Oct. 3, 1963.

India's Directive

He then announced that a directive had been issued (by the Govt. of India) to bring Kashmir closer to the rest of India, and that as a first step it had been decided to change the designation of 'Sadr-i-Riyasat' to Governor, and 'Prime Minister of the State' to Chief Minister, and to bring the State in line with the other States (Provinces) of India.

Bakhshi Ghulam Mohammad added that the necessary constitutional formalities to give effect to this change would be carried out by the State 'assembly' when it meets in March 1964.

This contemplated move was brought to the attention of the President of the Security Council by the Permanent Representative of Pakistan to the United Nations in his letter of Oct. 9, 1963 (S/5437) as it involved a gross breach of India's commitment to the principles of the resolutions of the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan and of the Security Council.

Outrageous Claim

In reply to this letter the permanent representative of India in his letter of Nov. 12, 1963, (S/5454) made the outrageous claim that Jammu and Kashmir is a constituent State of the Indian Union and, therefore, Indian Union territory. In other words, he challenged the basic position of the Security Council as set forth in the aforementioned resolutions.

A few weeks later Bakhshi Ghulam Mohammad was replaced by a new Puppet 'Premier' Shamsuddin, one of whose first acts was, under orders from Delhi, to install in office a Cabinet in which as many as seven out of 12 Ministers and Deputy Ministers were Hindus, even though the State of Jammu and Kashmir is overwhelmingly Muslim.

He then proceeded to dismiss over 100 officers of the State Govt., who were to be replaced by persons with a more secular and nationalistic outlook. In other words, the administration of the State was being purged of Muslim officers whose only fault was that they were in some small measure conscious of the special status of their homeland and their right to self-determination. Both the change in the composition of the Cabinet and this purge had been carried out at the behest of the Government of India as part of India's design to annex Indian-occupied Jammu and Kashmir to India.

Annexation Measures

That 'Premier' Bakhshi Ghulam Mohammad had merely foreshadowed in his announcement of Oct. 3, 1963, what the Government of India had already planned and was very soon confirmed by the Minister of Home Affairs of the Indian Government, Mr. Gulzarilal Nanda. On Nov. 27, 1963, Mr. Nanda outlined in the Indian Parliament the further measures of annexation of the Indian-occupied part of the State that the Government of India had decided on. He specifically mentioned the following :

1. An order of the President under Article 370 of the Constitution was issued on Sept. 25, 1963 applying to Jammu and Kashmir State entry 26 of the Concurrent List (List III) in the Seventh Schedule in respect of legal and medical professions and other consequential provisions of the (Indian) Constitution.
2. A proposal to apply to Jammu and Kashmir entry 24 of the Concurrent List insofar as it relates to welfare of labour in the coal mining industry, is under consideration.
3. It has been decided that representatives of Jammu and Kashmir in the Lok Sabha should be chosen by direct election as in other States. Effect will be given to this after the termination of the present emergency.
4. It has also been decided that the Sadr-i-Riyasat and Prime Minister of Jammu and Kashmir should be designated as Governor and Chief Minister respectively. Legislation to give effect to the proposal is expected to be taken up during the next session of the State Legislature.
5. Article 370 of the Constitution occurs in part XXI of the Constitution which deals with temporary and transitional provisions. Since this Article was incorporated in the Constitution many changes have been made which bring the State of Jammu and Kashmir in line with the rest of India. The State is fully integrated to the Union of India. Government are of opinion that they should not take any initiative now for the complete repeal of Article 370. This will, no doubt, be brought about by further changes in consultation with the Government and the Legislative Assembly of Jammu and Kashmir State. This process has continued in the last few years and may be allowed to continue in the same way.

Gradual Erosion

This statement of the Indian Home Minister was endorsed immediately thereafter by the Indian Prime Minister. In the Indian Parliament Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru explained that Article 370 of the Constitution of India which envisages a quasi-autonomous status for the State of Jammu and Kashmir will be subjected to a process of gradual erosion.

It is clear from these declarations that the Government of India is deliberately set on defying the Security Council and on integrating the Indian-occupied part of Jammu and Kashmir with the Indian Union. This is being done in flagrant repudiation of India's commitment to the principles contained in the two resolutions of the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan, which enjoin that the question of the accession of the State to India or Pakistan will be decided through the democratic method of free and impartial plebiscite, conducted under the auspices of the United Nations.

The members of the Security Council will recall the assurances repeatedly given in the past by Indian representatives to the effect that the Government of India would not act contrary to its commitment to the principles of the United Nations Commission's resolutions. Among those which are now being violated are the resolutions of the Security Council of March 30, 1951 and Jan. 24, 1957. The former resolution states inter alia in its preamble :

"Affirming that the convening of a constituent assembly recommended by the General Council of the All Jammu and Kashmir National Conference and any action that that assembly might attempt to take to determine the future shape and affiliation of the entire State or any part thereof, would not constitute a disposition of the State in accordance with the above principles".

January 24, 1957 Resolution

The resolution of Jan. 24, 1957, after reminding the Governments of India and Pakistan the authorities concerned, of the resolutions of the Security Council and of the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan of Aug. 13, 1948 and Jan. 5, 1949, lays down the following in its operative paragraphs:

"Reaffirms the affirmation in its resolution of March 30, 1951 and declares that the convening of a constituent assembly, as recommended by the General Council of the All Jammu and Kashmir National Conference, and any action that that assembly may have taken or might attempt to take to determine the future shape and affiliation of the entire State or any part thereof or action by the parties concerned in support of any such action by the 'assembly', would not constitute a disposition of the State in accordance with the above principle."

Second Letter

In a second letter addressed by the Permanent Representative of Pakistan to the President of the Security Council on Jan. 3, 1964, the Permanent Representative has invited the attention of the Security Council to the above quoted statement of November 27, 1963 by the Indian Home Minister and has pointed out that the steps contemplated by the Government of India are patently designed to consolidate India's hold over the bulk of Jammu and Kashmir, to demoralise its people and interpose further obstacles in the establishment of conditions for the exercise of their free choice in regard to their future, and therefore, constitute a defiance of the Security Council and the Principles of the Charter of the United Nations.

On Dec. 14, 1963, the Government of Pakistan also addressed a Note of strong protest to the Government of India against the proposed measures. The Government of India have rejected that protest and termed it as an unwarranted interference in the internal affairs of India.

My Government for its part, has never admitted and will never recognise India's fictitious claim to the territory of Jammu and Kashmir in disregard of the right of self-determination of the people of the State as pledged to them in the resolutions of the Security Council and the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan to which India also is a party.

Theft of Relic

The persistence of the Government of India over the last 15 years in a policy of trampling under foot the basic and inalienable rights of the people of Jammu and Kashmir, and its illegal and arbitrary legislative and administrative measures to annex the State have created a vicious climate in the State. It is this climate in which the political, religious and cultural rights of the people of the State are treated with scorn by their Indian rulers, that has made possible such criminal acts of sacrilege and vandalism as the recent theft of the sacred hair of the Holy Prophet Mohammad (Peace be upon Him) from the Hazratbal Shrine near Srinagar and the attempt to set fire to a Muslim shrine in Kishtwar in Jammu province.

The sacrilege committed in the Hazratbal Shrine has served to provide a spark to the bitter discontent and indignation which had been mounting in Kashmir as a result of India's policies and which are now rampant amongst the people of Indian-occupied Jammu and Kashmir against recent Indian moves to 'integrate' that part of the State with the Indian Union.

Since the theft of the Holy Relic on Dec. 26, 1963, the Muslim population of Jammu and Kashmir has given vent to its anguish and anger through massive demonstrations for more than 10 days paralysing life in Srinagar and many other parts of the State. This sacrilege as pointed out by their leader, Sheikh Abdullah from his prison, would tragically complete the process of disintegration of the political, moral and spiritual life of the people.

According to foreign newspaper reports (New York Times of Dec. 30), hundreds of thousands of Muslims kept marching in mourning processions day after day through the streets of Srinagar. Despite the bitter cold of winter they could not be deterred from giving expression to their anger even by police bullets and baton charges.

What took place in those days can perhaps be best described by quoting from the despatches of impartial foreign correspondents.

The "Evening Star" of Washington carried the following despatch from Mr. Richard Critchfield filed from Srinagar on January 2:

"Between 300,000 and a half million deeply grieving Muslims plodded doggedly in seemingly endless processions for the sixth straight day here yesterday, mourning the theft of the Prophet Mohammad's sacred hair on December 26. Virtually the entire population of this Himalaya-rimmed capital abandoned their homes to open the daylight hours marching through the cobbled streets and demanding in enraged voices that their holy relic be returned to its shrine.

"Yesterday afternoon, the processions converged in a human mass stretching as far as the eye could see before the Khanyar mosque in the centre of the city to hear religious leaders. In thunderous shouts, Srinagar's people demanded that the processions and virtual stoppage of normal life here will go on until the sacred hair is found.

"A funeral dirge of thousands of voices echoed through the city, expressing the sorrow that could turn into violent rage at any time.

"Most of the Srinagar men spent a sleepless night on Tuesday praying for the holy relic's return. Many already are shouting demands that Sheikh Abdullah, Kashmir's popular former Prime Minister, be released after a decade of imprisonment by India."

BITTER RESENTMENT

"Bitter resentment is rampant against Hindu India's recent moves to integrate Kashmir fully into the Indian Union."

Again, in a second despatch from Srinagar sent on January 6, the same correspondent wrote:

"In Srinagar's Red Square, where India's Prime Minister Nehru promised Kashmir self-determination 16 years ago, thousands today thunderously demanded the release of their former Prime Minister, Sheikh Abdullah, who was jailed by Mr. Nehru in 1953.

"In a scene of pandemonium, an immense gathering proclaimed Sheikh Abdullah as the only man who could be trusted to identify the recovered sacred hair of the Prophet Mohammad. The hair was stolen from a Muslim shrine here on December 26 and was 'recovered' on Saturday."

GENERAL STRIKE

"As the All-India Radio was broadcasting descriptions of public jubilation here following the recovery of the holy relic by an Indian investigation team, Srinagar's people grimly sat for hours amidst falling sleet. Their leaders announced that public mourning and a general strike would continue until Sheikh Abdullah was released.

"What began as a religious demonstration now clearly is an open rebellion against the Bakhshi Government and India itself.

"The massive impact of the grief and protest of the people of Jammu and Kashmir has been so momentous and unprecedented that even Indian newspaper correspondents have been compelled to acknowledge something in the nature of an 'open rebellion against the Bakhshi Government and India itself.'"

Writing in the "Hindustan Times", a leading Delhi newspaper, on January 8, under the heading "What now after Kashmir's 10-day nightmare?", a celebrated Indian correspondent states that "the 10-days between the purloining of the Prophet's hair and its accidental re-appearance, have shaken a great deal in Kashmir".

“It was a situation of complete administrative breakdown. The Government offices were at a standstill, the hospitals were unmanned, the post offices had ceased to function, and the shops were closed.

“The only way that the Government showed its presence was to order some indiscriminate arrests which only worsened the situation because some of those arrested were the very people who were trying to contain the anger of the crowds.”

MYTH EXPLODES

The question now is where do we go from here? The myth of the Bakhshi family hold on the people of Kashmir, sustained by electoral fraud, is completely exploded. It is unthinkable that the Government of Kashmir can be handed back to men so thoroughly exposed as without popular allegiance.

It may here be pointed out that India's representatives have in the past repeatedly urged before the Security Council that the “elections” held in Jammu and Kashmir since 1948 under the twin domination of Indian military occupation and the Bakhshi regime, were “fair” and “free” and that the verdicts of the fraudulently elected assemblies in favour of accession and annexation to India, must be accepted as valid.

These demonstrations and the general strike are not only an expression of the resentment of a long-suffering people against the outrage perpetrated against their deepest religious sentiments.

They are also an expression of their intense frustration and bitter discontent at the move of the Government of India forcibly to annex their homeland.

The “Guardian” (Manchester) of December 31, writes as follows:

“The past few days' disturbances in the state capital Srinagar, over the disappearance of a sacred relic, are different in kind from previous communal clashes in State's farther south, but are probably nonetheless worrying the Indian Government. The anger of the demonstrators seems directed primarily not against the local Hindus but against the Kashmir State Government, the members of which are Muslims. The buildings they set fire to were Government offices, a police station and two cinemas belonging to a former Chief Minister (Bakshi Ghulam Mohammad).

“It is widely assumed—even by many Indians—that in a plebiscite more Kashmiris would opt for Pakistan than for India. That is one reason why Mr. Nehru long ago withdrew his agreement to a plebiscite, and why elections in Kashmir, unlike those in the undisputed parts of India, hardly have even the crudest appearance of being free and democratic. But citizens not able to express their political feelings by vote often (at least in non-totalitarian countries like India and Kashmir) find even more violent ways of demonstrations.”

The “Economist” (London) in its issue of January 4, has also underscored this aspect of the events which have overtaken Indian colonial rule in the State:

“Tension within and over Kashmir had risen since the resignation three months ago of the former Prime Minister Bakhshi Ghulam Mohammad. One of his last acts was to announce certain constitutional changes (the State Legislature will vote on them shortly) that would serve to integrate the State more closely with India. Pakistan promptly protested, and there has since been a series of border incidents. Simultaneously there has been pressure in New Delhi which the Indian Government has resisted, for the abrogation of Article in the Indian constitution which ensures Kashmir’s special status.

“This idea has been vigorously supported in Jammu, the southern and largely Hindu part of Kashmir State by the Hindu opposition party there. When the new Prime Minister Mr. Shamsuddin and his colleagues arrived for the winter in Jammu town, they were met by a storm of brickbats in which 90 people were injured. The effect has been both to arouse those in Kashmir who dislike the idea of even closer links to India and to stir up religious hostility from which the valley on the whole has been remarkably free. The theft of the holy relic was spark to the powder.”

The open rebellion against the Bakhshi Government, (and his nominee, Shamsuddin) and India itself continues. Despite the intensification of terror and repression by the Indian occupation authorities the people of Jammu and Kashmir are determined to wage their heroic, peaceful struggle until Sheikh Abdullah is released and liberation from Indian rule is won.

SITUATION TENSE

Despite the alleged recovery of the holy relic, the situation inside Indian-occupied Jammu and Kashmir remains extremely tense and explosive.

An awesome blanket of secrecy has enveloped the state. Foreign correspondents have been shunted out of Kashmir and civil communications suspended. Very little news is allowed by India to trickle through.

All that is known is that the administration is still paralysed. A reign of repression and terror has been let loose. The Indian army has been reinforced. Nevertheless, the people are determined to continue their struggle.

The All-Parties Action Committee has called on the people to keep all normal activity suspended until the Government accepted its demands, including the release of all those arrested during the 10 days and an impartial judicial inquiry was held into the sacrilege.

Ever since the Hazratbal and Kishtwar outrages and the subsequent reign of repression in Indian-occupied Kashmir, the feelings of the people of Azad Kashmir and of Pakistan have been incensed. Tension has mounted dangerously. It found expression in some regrettable incidents in the Khulna and Jessore districts of East Pakistan on January 3, against the Hindu minority. However, these were promptly suppressed and order was restored.

In the annual session of the ruling Indian National Congress, held only a few days ago, inflammatory statements about the situation in Khulna and Jessore were made by its leaders. The Indian Minister of Home Affairs, Mr. Gulzarilal Nanda, threatened from the party's platform on January 9, to take "appropriate action to deal with the situation created by the communal riots at Khulna and Jessore in East Pakistan. Within hours after those speeches, violence and death were let loose against the Muslim minority in the city of Calcutta and in the West Bengal districts of 24 Parganas, Hoogly, Howrah, Burdwan and other areas.

There have since been wide-spread killing of Muslims and various cases of arson and looting and destruction of Muslim property. Within three days, according to a foreign news agency report, the number of the dead added up to 200. On January 12, in one day alone 14,000 terror-stricken Muslim refugees crossed into East Pakistan from West Bengal. By the following day, the figure mounted to over 20,000.

On the same day, the President of Pakistan issued a strong appeal to the people of Pakistan to maintain calm. Emphasising the supreme need for maintaining communal peace despite the anxiety and provocation that the tragic events in West Bengal must have caused them.

The President also sent an urgent appeal to the President of India to take immediate and effective steps to restore order and peace in riot-torn Calcutta and other areas of West Bengal and create a sense of security in the minds of the Muslim minority and enable the Muslim refugees to return to their homes in the larger interests of both India and Pakistan. He added that he could not help feeling that in taking the law into their own hands with a view to driving the Muslims out of West Bengal into East Pakistan certain elements in the majority community in West Bengal have drawn encouragement from the policy that the Government of India has been following over two years despite our protests and appeals to drive out Indian Muslims living in districts bordering East Pakistan.

The number of such refugees who have registered themselves with East Pakistan authorities had by the end of December already reached 95,613. To this number have now been added 20,000 terror-stricken Muslims who have crossed over into East Pakistan from the riot-affected areas in West Bengal.

INFLUX OF REFUGEES IN EAST WING

To the great regret and anxiety of my Government, the situation in Calcutta and West Bengal has not yet been brought under control. Senseless acts of killing, arson and looting continue to take place. The toll of the dead is mounting, in Calcutta alone there have been 500 cases of arson. As many as 75,000 Muslims have been rendered homeless in Calcutta and are stranded in parks and on the roads. The disturbances have spread to yet another district in West Bengal. Thousands continue to escape into East Pakistan.

The communal fury in Calcutta and West Bengal and the grim situation in Kashmir are the outcome of the same deep-rooted malady—disregard of human rights by India. The present communal riots are not the first of their kind. There have been since the great riot of 1950, well over 500 outbursts of communal frenzy against Muslims in India.

The Government of India's actions since Bakhshi Ghulam Mohammad's announcement of Oct. 3, to carry further the process of 'integration' of Jammu and Kashmir with Indian Union, the Hazratbal and Kishtwar outrages, the subsequent regime of Indian repression in the State concealed from world by a wall of secrecy, followed by widespread killings, looting and arson in Calcutta and in other districts of West Bengal, have created an extremely tense and explosive situation in Azad Kashmir and throughout Pakistan.

Pakistan's relations with India have been dangerously strained. Unless it can be demonstrated that the peaceful procedures of the United Nations are capable of halting the high handed and dangerous policy that India is following in regard to the State of Jammu and Kashmir, and of inducing her to respect the rights of the Muslim population of the State and in the Indian Union, the people of Azad Kashmir and Pakistan may in desperation turn to other courses.

I have the honour, therefore, to request on behalf of my Government that Your Excellency convene an immediate meeting of the Security Council to consider the grave turn that the situation in Indian-occupied Jammu and Kashmir has taken and the danger that it poses to peace in the region.

Accept, Your Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.
